Problem Statement

The challenge was to create a music app that not only offered a comprehensive range of features but also provided a seamless and enjoyable user experience, especially for users who needed to read text in both English and French

Possible solution

Beeksi is a music app designed with a focus on user experience and accessibility. It offers a comprehensive range of features, including user registration and profiles, a vast music library, search functionality, playlists, personalized recommendations, a user-friendly music player, social features, radio and podcasts, intuitive user interaction, and seamless integration with popular streaming services and social media platforms. Additionally, Beeksi supports both English and French, and users can choose from a variety of fonts optimized for readability in both languages. Other features include offline mode for listening to music without an internet connection and lyrics display for users who enjoy singing along or appreciating the artistry of the music.

Design Process

The design process section is a crucial part of your UI/UX case study. It showcases your problem-solving methodology and the steps taken to arrive at the final design solution

In a music app, the Search screen is an interface where users can enter keywords to find specific songs, artists, albums, or playlists. It typically includes a search bar and may display recent searches or suggestions based on the user's listening history.

One of the challenges was to choose a font that would look easy to read in both English and French
